

"WEEK WITH... SYLVIA MOLLOY

Sylvia Molloy is Albert Schweitzer Professor in the Humanities at NYU, where she teaches in the Departments of Spanish and Portuguese and Comparative Literature. She obtained her Doctorat in Comparative Literature and the Diplôme d'Etudes Supérieures de Lettres Modernes at the University of Paris. Her major interests are Latin American literature, cultural studies, feminist and queer theory, autobiography, and fin-de-siècle literatures. Professor Molloy has also taught at Princeton University and Yale University, and has been President of the Modern Language Association. Among other works, she has published Las letras de Borges (Sudamericana 1979, republished in English as Signs of Borges (Duke UP, 1994), At Face Value: Autobiographical Writing in Spanish America (Cambridge UP, 1991); Women's Writing in Latin America (edited w/Robert Irwin, Duke UP). Professor Molloy has also published two novels: En breve cárcel (1981) and El común olvido (2002), and a collection of short fiction, Varia imaginación (2003).

Sponsored by the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, International and Area Studies, Comparative Literature, Women Studies, and the Center for the Humanities

N O V E M B E R

13

LECTURE

"Errant Scribes:
Travel and Translation"

Women's Building Lounge
3:00pm

14

WORKSHOP

with graduates
and undergraduates
students

Ridgley 219
5:00pm

15

LECTURE

"Property Rights:
Autobiographies,
Fictions and Quotes"

Brookings 300
4:00pm

